For me the biggest difference between Pedia and Therasuit is the science base behind and the physiology behind the Method. These explanation and what it's based on, only happens during the Therasuit training. During the Therasuit Training, I could understand and really believe in how the suit works and how I can use to the best benefit of my client. I could see ways to work with my client inside of the cage, when with Pedia I could not. This was only possible because I understand the physiology behind it, all the "why" the amount of time in the protocol, intensity, the use of the suit, posture and adequate exercises, when therapy is indicated. In resume, Only Therasuit presents with scientific explanation in relation to what is talked about. It is not possible to have the same outcome with Pediasuit, the therapist does not understand after the training, how to utilize the tools that are available, it is never talked about nor explained after the training. Without the proper knowledge, you can not provide a necessary and adequate treatment, the potential is never maximized for the improvement of the patient.
